

What we do

Training and development

We provide

- access to training
- good practice advice and guidance
- support to strengthen entry routes into the profession

Accreditation

We recognise and promote the skills and competence of professional archaeologists

Networks

We provide an active community for professional archaeologists to support and shape our profession

- Area and Special Interest Groups
- Committees
- Conferences and events

Regulate the profession

Our Code of conduct and standards define good, ethical practice in archaeology. They provide the organisation, structures and mechanisms for self-regulation, allowing the profession to take responsibility for the assurance of the quality of our work, monitor it, and hold members to account

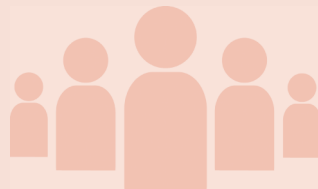

OUR AIM

For all professional archaeologists to have the skills, integrity and versatility to ensure archaeology bring real benefit to people's daily lives

Who we work with

- Employers
- Universities and training providers
- Government
- Trade unions
- Clients
- Other sector partners
- Other professional bodies

What we achieve

Improving professional archaeology through

- Competence and knowledge
- Recognition and respect
- Career pathways and prospects
- Diversity and skills
- Ethical awareness
- Value and public benefit

CIfA